

A Child and a Tree.

I've always liked trees. I like climbing them. I like to sit in their shade. I like to walk in the woods. Granddad told me that a tree and a child are alike. That we grow tall and strong, and our roots hold the land together. I think children all around the world must like trees as much as I do.

I want all of the children in the world to help me make adults take care of our trees. They will listen to us. Join this web site and I will teach you all about trees, and why they are important. We need more trees.

A Child and One Adult

If every child teaches one adult, we can save trees and plant new ones. Talk to adults you know about planting trees where you live. This site will teach you how to plant trees, and what kinds of trees grow around your home. Learn why we cut down some trees, too – after we plant new ones!

Every Child

By joining this site, children can make a difference. Your donation will be used to either plant a tree or teach others about trees. Just like the trees we plant, our group will grow bigger, and our web site will grow bigger.

BARK'ers represent us at local events and help other organizations, like Habitat for Humanity, Waterkeeper Alliance, Nature Conservancy, and The Audubon Society, with their projects.
